FRUITS AND EARLY VEGETABLES. arce at Present-Strawberries Arriving-

Damage by Frost. "How are the fruit and vegetabl narkets?" a prominent wholesale dealer was asked by an Intelligencer reporter,

"There are hardly any fruits or fresh vegotables in the market," answered he. "We depend on Florida for our chief supply of early tomatoes, beans and peas, but the late fronts in that State killed the carly strawberries, tomatoes and beans, and we will now have to wait until the Norfolk and North Carolina crope begin to move in. We have a few peas, which are bardy and were not affected by the frost, but tomatoes are ree and beans cannot be had. Straw scarce and beans cannot be had. Straw-berries, however, have taken a decided drop in price since last week. At that time this fruit was worth 20 and 25 cents a basket, but it is now as low as 15 cents. This reduction in price is owing to large Cincinnati shipments of Tennessee ber-ries. There are hundreds of acres of strawberries in the latter State, and as soon as shipments from there begin to soon as shipments from there begin to rrive, the price drops.

"At this time last year the market was arrive, the price drops.

"At this time last year the market was tolerably well stocked with vegetables, each as beans, peas, tomaloes and cucumbers, though the general and late crop was short. Did you notice how bananas rule? This fruit is not really scarce, but the importers have combined to keep up the prices, and have succeeded with the greatest ease, owing to the tearcity of other fruits. Wait until our small fruits begin to come in and you will see bananas drop."

"Have the recent frosts injured the fruits in this neighborhood?"
"I don't believe that pears, apples and peaches have been injured, though berries in this latitude, I understand, will be a little late. The track farmers of Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia will soon begin to ship their products, however, and the price of small fruits and carly vegetables will then come within the reach of a moderately filled pocketbook."
